(Case called; videoconference)

THE DEPUTY CLERK: Will all parties please state who never for the record.

MR. HART: Kevin Hart representing the United States, your Honor.

MR. KLOTZ: Martin Klotz representing Mr. Aiyer, your Honor. I am here with Joseph Baio and Jocelyn Sher of my office, Mr. Aiyer, the defendant, and Alex Kislwitz.

THE COURT: The court reporter is on the phone; is that correct?

COURT REPORTER: I am, your Honor.

THE COURT: A couple of preliminary matters. We're doing this sentence by Skype video today because there is a national emergency caused by the pandemic. Our chief judge has also declared an emergency. The defendant has consented to doing this proceeding by videoconference. It is necessary to hold the proceeding remotely rather than in person because holding the proceeding in person would seriously jeopardize public health and safety by the presence of so many people in the courtroom.

This proceeding cannot be further delayed without serious harm to the interests of justice because the defendant is entitled to a speedy sentence, which has already been delayed. I offered to put the sentence over further to a time where everyone could be present in court and where we could

K9H6AIYS

1 make the necessary arrangements, for example, for an additional 2 courtroom to accommodate people; but it was the defendant's 3 preference to go forward today understandably and the defendant 4 is entitled to a speedy sentence. So we're proceeding by 5 videoconference today.

6 One other preliminary matter. One of my new clerks
7 who started in August worked at a law firm before starting here
8 and had contact with some of the documents related to this case
9 while he was in private practice. Therefore, he has not worked 10 on the sentence at all. Although, he may have been involved in 11 setting up this Skype conference. Nothing about that affects 12 anything that I do in the case. I always bring these issues to 13 the parties' attention and so I have.

14 I have received the presentence report prepared 15 February 13, 2020, revised March 17, 2020, together with the 16 sentencing recommendation and the addendum. I have received 17 the defendant's sentencing memo dated April 7th, 2020, and 18 supporting documents. I received the government's sentencing 19 memo dated April 17, 2020, and the attachments. I have 20 received the defendant's response dated May 5, 2020. I have 21 received the defense letter dated August 28, 2020, and the 22 government's letter dated September 11th, 2020, which was an 23 amendment of a previous letter.

24 Let me begin with the calculation of the sentencing 25 guideline range.

K9H6AIYS

1 By the way, I should pause at the outset. Does anyone 2 want me to make any other findings with respect to sentence or 3 comment on anything that I said so far.

4 MR. HART: No comment from the government, your Honor.

5 MR. KLOTZ: No, your Honor.

6 THE COURT: Okay. Let me begin with the calculation
7 of the sentencing guideline range based on the parties' 8 submissions. I think that that would be the most efficient and 9 fair way to deal with the issues so that I can explain to you
10 based upon all of the papers submitted how I have calculated 11 the guidelines sentencing range. I would then call on each of 12 the parties to find out if there are any other objections to 13 the presentence report and anything that the lawyers and the 14 defendant wants to say with respect to sentence, including 15 anything that they would like to say with respect to a 16 discussion of the 3553(a) factors.

17 Let me begin with the calculation of the sentencing
18 guidelines range based upon the submissions of the parties.
19 First, there is an error in the presentence report as the 20 government points out. Under the guidelines, the fine range is 21 $20,000 to $1 million and so I will make that change on page 24 22 of the presentence report.

23 Do the parties agree with that?

24 MR. HART: The government agrees, your Honor.

25 MR. KLOTZ: Yes, your Honor.

K9H6AIYS

1 THE COURT: Now, the presentence report calculates the 2 total offense level as 21, the criminal history category as 3 one, and a guidelines sentencing range of 37 to 46 months. The 4 Probation Office reached this calculation by reaching Section 5 2R1.1 of the guidelines, the guideline for bid-rigging, 6 price-fixing or market allocation agreements among competitors,
7 which has a base level of 12. The Probation Office added eight
8 levels under 2R1.1(b)(2)(D) based on the volume of commerce 9 attributable to the defendant being more than $100 million.
10 The Probation Office also added one level under 2R1.(b)(1) 11 because the conduct involved participation in an agreement to 12 submit noncompetitive bids. The Probation Office recommends a 13 downward variance to 24 months' imprisonment.

14 The defendant raises three objections to the 15 guidelines calculations. First, the defendant contends that 16 there is no evidence of any volume of commerce attributable to 17 the defendant because there is no evidence that the alleged 18 conspiracy actually affected the price of any of the 19 transactions at issue and therefore the 12-level enhancement 20 should be eliminated. Moreover, the defendant argues that if 21 the enhancement were applied, the defendant should be entitled 22 to a downward departure under Section 5K2.0 of the guidelines 23 because the application of the enhancement in this case would 24 be a circumstance not adequately taken into account by the 25 drafters of the guidelines. Second, the defendant contends

K9H6AIYS

1 that there is no evidence that the defendant participated in an 2 agreement to submit noncompetitive bids. Third, the defendant 3 contends that he is entitled to a two-level decrease in the 4 offense level for a minor-role adjustment under Section 5 3B1.2(b) of the guidelines.

6 I will take the objections in order. First, with 7 respect to volume of commerce adjustment, I note that the 8 objection is somewhat academic. The Probation Office 9 recommended a downward variance to 24 months. Based on all of 10 the submissions and a consideration of all of the 3553(a) 11 factors, I would not impose a sentence in excess of 24 months.
12 I am not saying I would even impose a sentence of 24 months. I 13 am saying that I would not impose a sentence in excess of 24 14 months.

15 The lowest offense level that includes 24 months is 16 offense level 17. All other calculations being the same, that 17 would mean an enhancement for commerce of four rather than 18 eight levels. A four-level enhancement applies if the volume 19 of commerce attributable to the defendant was more than $10
20 million. There is no reasonable interpretation of the evidence 21 in this case that does not include a volume of commerce 22 attributable to the defendant in excess of $10 million.
23 Indeed, individual episodes that were plainly in furtherance of 24 the conspiracy included volumes of commerce done by the 25 defendant in excess of $10 million; but the Court has an

1 obligation to calculate the guidelines as a starting point in 2 the sentencing process and therefore the Court will do so.

3 The Court begins with the guidelines. The guideline 4 provides that the various enhancement levels apply if "The 5 volume of commerce attributable to the defendant was more" than 6 the various benchmarks. The guideline provides: "For purposes 7 of this guideline, the volume of commerce attributable to an 8 individual participant in a conspiracy is the volume of 9 commerce done by him or his principal in goods or services that 10 were affected by the violation." However, the guideline does 11 not provide any definition of "the volume of commerce done by 12 him or his principal in goods or services that were affected by 13 the violation."

14 The background commentary provides some insight. It 15 makes clear that volume of commerce is not the same as profits
16 or actual damages. The background states: "The agreements 17 among competitors covered by this section are almost invariably 18 covert conspiracies that are intended to and serve no purpose 19 other than to restrict output and raise prices and that are so 20 plainly anticompetitive that they have been recognized as 21 illegal per se, i.e., without any inquiry in individual cases 22 as to their actual competitive affect. The offense levels are 23 not based directly on the damage caused or profit made by the 24 defendant because damages are difficult and time-consuming to 25 establish. The volume of commerce is an acceptable and more

1 readily measurable substitute."

2 The parties agree that the most relevant case to 3 interpret the meaning of a volume of commerce affected by the 4 violation is United States v. SKW Metals & Alloys Inc., 195
5 F.3d 83 (2d Cir. 1999). In that case, the conspiracy involved 6 an agreement among competitors to set a floor price for 7 ferrosilicon. The Court of Appeals concluded that it was error
8 for the district Court to limit the volume of commerce affected 9 to simply sales that were made at or above the floor price.
10 Id. 90. The Court explained: "While the price-fixing 11 conspiracy is operating and has any influence on sales, it is 12 reasonable to conclude that all sales made by defendants during 13 that period are 'affected by the conspiracy.' Here, once it was 14 found that the price-fixing conspiracy was successful during 15 two periods, it was error to calculate the affect on commerce
16 solely in terms of sales that were made at or above the target 17 price without considering as well the sales prices that were 18 influenced without hitting or exceeding the target price or 19 sales that were affected in other ways." Id.

20 The Court of Appeals also rejected the government's 21 argument in SKW that all sales during the period of the 22 conspiracy should be included because it was possible that 23 there could be a conspiracy with an overt act that "fails to 24 influence market transactions." Id. 91.

25 The government in this case does not commit the error

K9H6AIYS

1 that the Court of appeals pointed out the government had 2 committed in this case because it does not seek to include the 3 total volume of transactions that the defendant engaged in in 4 the Forex market for CEEMEA currencies during the period of the 5 conspiracy. Rather, the government has focused on 14 6 transactions, the total volume of commerce for the defendant of 7 $231,426,386. The government's calculation is based on the 8 trial exhibits and the expert summary and is reasonable. It 9 includes the volume of the transactions as reflected in the 10 trial exhibits based on the volume from the beginning of the 11 conversations among the conspirators about a transaction in 12 furtherance of the conspiracy to the end of the transaction.
13 The defendant contends in each case that there was not in fact 14 any affect on price and that the defendant did not intend to 15 violate the law.

16 In analyzing those transactions, the touchstone is the 17 guidance of the Court of appeals in the SKW case that the issue 18 is whether the sales prices were influenced or the sales were 19 affected in other ways. The Court of Appeals further 20 explained: "A conspirator profits from an agreement to fix 21 prices when the conspiracy is incrementally successful at 22 impacting the terms of trade or at elevating the price above 23 the punitive market price regardless of whether the target
24 price is achieved. A finding as to the volume of affected 25 commerce does not require a sale-by-sale accounting or an

K9H6AIYS

1 econometric analysis or expert testimony. The Court may 2 consider the goals of the conspiracy and the steps taken to 3 implement it, the market share of the conspirators, and the 4 persons with whom they transacted business and may otherwise 5 deduce the affect on commerce from the pressures brought to 6 bear on it." Id. 91.

7 The Court has already exhaustively examined the 8 evidence in this case and found that there was more than 9 sufficient evidence to find that the government proved beyond a 10 reasonable doubt that the defendant was a member of a 11 conspiracy to fix prices and rig bids in the market for CEEMEA 12 currencies. The defendant and his co-conspirators worked for 13 four of the largest banks in the market and dealt with large 14 sophisticated customers who expected that the banks would 15 compete to offer them the best prices when in fact the 16 conspirators did not compete but conspired to fix prices and 17 rig bids.

18 In its lengthy submission, the defendant repeats the 19 arguments that the Court rejected in denying the motion for 20 acquittal or a new trial. It is unnecessary to repeat all of 21 the arguments here, particularly in view of the Court of 22 Appeals' admonition that a finding of the volume affected does 23 not require a sale-by-sale accounting. However, it is useful 24 to illustrate several of the transactions to justify an 25 enhancement for a volume of more than $100 million of commerce

1 done by the defendant that was affected by the conspiracy. In 2 doing this summary, I have relied on some of the transactions 3 used by the government in its calculation and which were 4 discussed at length in the Court's prior opinion.

5 In the October 14, 2010, transaction that the Court 6 analyzed in its prior opinion, the Court explained how the 7 defendant and Katz worked together to move the price of a 8 dollar-ruble pair higher to their benefit and to the 9 disadvantage of a customer. This transaction involved 10 $5,493,960 for the defendant. On November 4, 2010, the 11 defendant and Katz coordinated their bids to a customer for a 12 dollar-ruble transaction so that Katz would show a slightly 13 lower price and the defendant would get the transaction. By 14 showing a slightly lower price, Katz was also able to show that 15 he was giving a competitive bid or apparently to the customer 16 giving a competitive bid. It was after this transaction that 17 Katz commented to the defendant, "Conspiracies are nice," and 18 defendant said, "Ha, ha, ha. Probably shouldn't put on Perma 19 chat." The volume of commerce involved for the defendant was 20 $29,617,619.

21 The defendant claims that no volume of commerce was 22 involved because the defendant did not change the bid that he 23 had originally quoted to Katz. That ignores the admonition of 24 the Court of appeals that sales may be affected in ways other 25 than price. The SKW court did not deal directly with a

K9H6AIYS

1 bid-rigging conspiracy, but if conspirators agree that one
2 conspirator will get the sale and another conspirator is to bid 3 in a way to appear to be competitive, a deliberately loose bid, 4 the terms of the sale are plainly affected, namely, who gets 5 the bid. This amount should also be included in the volume of 6 commerce affected for the defendant.

7 On December 21, 2001, both the defendant and Katz were 8 short dollars against the Turkish lira, which meant that they 9 would both profit if the price of dollars fell to essentially 10 buy dollars against the Turkish lira at a lower price. The 11 defendant and Katz agreed that Katz would hide the defendant's 12 buying interest in the dollars against lira in order to prevent 13 pushing the price of dollars higher. After a customer 14 transacted with Katz, Katz then sold $3 million to the 15 defendant, which meant as Katz testified the plan worked. The 16 volume of commerce involved in this transaction for the 17 defendant was $10 million.

18 On January 18, 2012, the defendant together with 19 Cummins and Katz pushed the price of the dollar-rand pair lower 20 so that the defendant would trigger a stop-loss order that he 21 had from Putnam Investments. The stop-loss order was in fact 22 triggered. At the end of the day, the defendant told Cummins 23 and Katz on the Bloomberg Chat: "BTW"-- by the way- "salute to 24 the first coordinated czar effort," to which Katz responded, 25 "Yep. Many more to come."

K9H6AIYS

1 The defendant attempts to discount this transaction by 2 arguing that he acted prudently in selling in view of market 3 conditions and that the stop-loss would have been triggered in 4 any event. None of these arguments eliminate the volume of 5 commerce that the defendant engaged in in a successful 6 coordinated effort with his co-conspirators to drive the price 7 down and thereby trigger the stop-loss order for his client.
8 The volume of commerce attributable to the defendant from this 9 effort is $46,325,807.

10 On February 28th, 2012, the defendant, Williams and 11 cummins had each received a request from the same customer to 12 sell dollars in exchange for rubles in a forward transaction.
13 Williams was showing a price of 29.05, Cummins was showing 14 29.06 and the defendant was showing 29.10, the best price for 15 the customer. Based on the information, the defendant moved 16 his price to 29.08 -- better for him and worse for the 17 customer; but the defendant knew he could win the bid, which he 18 did, because he knew the prices of his competitors. After the 19 defendant won the bid, he shared the information with the 20 others. Plainly the price of the transaction was affected by 21 the conspiracy. The volume of commerce affected was $5 22 million.

23 There were two transactions on May 20, 2013, that were 24 discussed in the Court's prior opinion. In one transaction the 25 defendant was short Euros against the Czech koruna and sought

K9H6AIYS

1 to buy Euros. Katz had been buying Euros and the defendant
2 told Katz to "stop running this Euro-Czech in my face." Katz 3 responded by canceling his trade in order to keep the price
4 lower for the defendant. The volume of commerce from this 5 transaction was $2,690,500.

6 In a second transaction that day, the defendant and 7 Katz needed to buy Turkish lira in exchange for dollars. After 8 they realized that the defendant needed the larger amount, Katz 9 told the defendant to go ahead of him and the defendant then 10 traded in the market. The total amount of commerce involved in 11 this transaction was $3 million for the defendant. The 12 combined total of these transactions was $5,569,500.

13 The combined total of the volume of commerce for the 14 defendant involved in these transactions was $102,006,886 which 15 supports the Probation Office adjustment of eight levels for a 16 volume of commerce done by the defendant that were affected by 17 the violation. I have relied on the transactions that were 18 discussed at length in this Court's prior opinion denying the 19 motion for a judgment of acquittal and for a new trial and that 20 the government included in its calculation in its sentencing 21 memorandum and the attached exhibits. My descriptions were in 22 turn based on the trial record.

23 I appreciate that the government relied on additional 24 transactions and concluded that the volume of commerce was in 25 excess of $230 million. However, it is unnecessary to discuss

K9H6AIYS

1 and analyze the additional transactions because an enhancement
2 of eight levels is triggered by a volume of commerce
3 attributable to the defendant of more than $100 million.
4 Moreover, it is useful to note that an adjustment of four 5 levels applies for a volume of commerce in excess of $10
6 million and an adjustment of six levels is triggered by a 7 volume of commerce in excess of $50 million. To analyze 8 further transactions would truly be academic at this point.

9 The defendant seeks a downward departure under Section
10 5K2.0.

11 I should say not only academic but would not affect 12 the Court's sentence in any way.

13 The defendant seeks a downward departure under Section 14 5K2.0 of the guidelines on the grounds that using the volume of 15 commerce results in a circumstance not adequately taken into 16 account by the guidelines for substantially in excess of that 17 taking into account by the guidelines particularly because the 18 defendant's profits were so much less than the volume of 19 commerce. There is no basis for such a departure. The volume 20 of commerce was plainly a carefully crafted adjustment.

21 The background commentary explains that "tying the 22 offense level to the scale or scope of the offense is important 23 in order to ensure that there is an incentive to desist from a 24 violation once it has begun. The offense levels are not based 25 directly on the damages caused or profit made by the defendant

K9H6AIYS

1 because damages are difficult and time-consuming to establish.
2 The volume of commerce is an acceptable and more readily 3 measurable substitute." Nor is the defendant correct that the 4 scope of the adjustment is a circumstance not adequately taken 5 into account by the guidelines.

6 The scope of the defendant's conspiracy was vast and 7 it compromised the integrity of an important marketplace and 8 harmed customers who mistakenly thought that they were dealing 9 with honest competitors. The scope of the enhancement should 10 not be reduced simply because the defendant dealt in 11 transactions involving millions of dollars. Therefor, the 12 defendant's objection to the eight-level adjustment is 13 overruled.

14 The defendant objects to the one-level adjustment for 15 "conduct that involved participation in an agreement to submit 16 noncompetitive bids" pursuant to 2R1.(b)(1). Initially the 17 defendant argued that this enhancement should only apply to 18 schemes involving bid rotation. The application notes to the 19 guidelines did refer to bid rotation as one example where if 20 the defendant did not in turn win a bid, there would be no
21 volume of commerce for the defendant although the defendant 22 contributed to the harm from the scheme and the Court should 23 consider a sentence near the top of the guideline range in such 24 a case (n. 6). However, the guidelines do not suggest that 25 that is the only example of an agreement to submit

K9H6AIYS

1 noncompetitive bids. The background commentary goes onto 2 state: "The commission believes that the volume of commerce is 3 liable to be an understated measure of seriousness in some 4 bid-rigging cases. For this reason and consistent with the 5 pre-guideline practice, the Commission has applied a one-level 6 increase for bid-rigging."

7 The defendant contends that there was no evidence of 8 bid-rigging. However, the Court already rejected that argument 9 when it denied the defendant's motion for a judgment of 10 acquittal. The Court found that there was ample evidence from 11 which a reasonable jury could conclude that the defendant 12 participated in a conspiracy to fix prices and rig bids. The 13 Court also pointed out that the defendant did not object to the 14 Court's instructions on the definition of bid-rigging. There 15 is no basis to reconsider those rulings as objections to the 16 one-level upward adjustment for bid-rigging.

17 The defendant also relies on United States v.
18 Sturdivant, 244 F.3d 71 -- although, I may not have that cite 19 correct in my notes-- (2d Cir. 2001). That case has nothing to 20 do with the guideline enhancement for bid-rigging. Sturdivant
21 was a case about a duplicitous narcotics indictment. The court 22 already rejected the argument that the indictment in this case 23 was duplicity and there is no basis to reconsider that 24 conclusion. Therefore, the objection to the one-level 25 adjustment for bid-rigging is overruled.

K9H6AIYS

1 The defendant contends that he should be afforded a 2 two-level downward adjustment pursuant to 3B1.2(d) for 3 allegedly being a minor participant in the criminal activity.
4 The argument is completely without merit. The commentary to 5 2R1.1 stresses that a mitigating adjustment will be rare.
6 Application Note 1 points out that "an individual defendant 7 should be considered for a mitigating role adjustment only if 8 he were responsible in some minor way for his firm's 9 participation in the conspiracy." In this case, of course, the 10 evidence indicates that the defendant was the primary person at 11 his employer bank who participated in this particular 12 conspiracy. The background commentary also points out that the 13 mitigating role in the offense will apply "in rare 14 circumstances."

15 There is no reasonable argument that the defendant
16 qualifies for a minor-role adjustment. A minor-role adjustment 17 applies to a participant who plays a part in committing the 18 offense that makes him substantially less culpable than the 19 average participant in the criminal activity. A minor 20 participant is less culpable than most other participants in 21 the criminal activity, but his role could not be described as 22 minimal. The application notes instruct the Court to consider 23 the following non-exhaustive factors:

24 A, the degree to which the defendant understood 25 the scope and structure the criminal activity;

K9H6AIYS

1 B, the degree to which the defendant participated 2 in planning or organizing the criminal activity;

3 C, the degree to which the defendant exercised 4 decision-making authority or influenced the exercise of 5 decision-making authority;

6 D, the nature and extent of the defendant's 7 participation in the commission of the criminal activity; and

8 E, the degree to which the defendant stood to 9 benefit.

10 All of these factors demonstrate that the defendant
11 was a full participant in the conspiracy along with Katz, 12 Cummins and Williams. He understood the scope of the 13 conspiracy and was an eager participant in the numerous 14 transactions outlined in the opinion denying the motion for 15 judgment of acquittal or a new trial. He participated in 16 planning and organizing individual trading events or refraining 17 from trading and he stood to profit from the transactions in 18 the same way as other participants. The only real argument the 19 defendant raises is that others participated in a prior 20 conspiracy before the defendant joined this conspiracy, but 21 that in no way minimizes the defendant's participation in the 22 conspiracy that was proven at trial. Therefore, the 23 defendant's argument for a minor-role adjustment is denied.

24 Therefore, the Court concludes that the Probation
25 Office correctly calculated that the total offense level is 21,

K9H6AIYS

1 namely, 12, pursuant to 2R1.1, plus one for bid-rigging scheme
2 under 2R1.1(b)(1), plus eight for the volume of commerce
3 adjustment excess of $100 million under 2R1.1(b)(2)(D) for a 4 total of 21. The criminal history category is one and the 5 guidelines sentencing range is 37 to 46 months.

6 I will now call on the lawyers and the defendant to 7 hear if they have reviewed the presentence report, the 8 recommendation and addendum, whether they have any additional 9 objections and I will listen to them if for anything else they 10 would like to tell me in connection with sentence, any 11 statement that they would like to make, anything that they 12 would like to tell me in connection with the 3553(a) factors or 13 otherwise any statement at all they would like to make.

14 I ask those two questions -- are there any other 15 objections and anything else that the parties would like to 16 tell me -- because under the rules if there are objections to 17 the presentence report, I have to rule on them and determine 18 them or determine that they wouldn't affect the sentence. So 19 that's why I call on the parties with two questions. Any other 20 objections that I haven't dealt with and then I listen to 21 anything that the parties want to tell me in connection with 22 sentence.

23 So, first of all, for the defendant. Mr. Klotz, have 24 you reviewed the presentence report, the recommendation, and 25 the addendum and have you it discussed them with the defendant?

K9H6AIYS

1 MR. KLOTZ: Yes, your Honor.

2 THE COURT: You are welcome to say anything about 3 those objections, too, if you want; but do you have any other 4 objections to the presentence report?

5 MR. KLOTZ: Your Honor, we made a series of objections 6 to some of the factual background description in the 7 presentence investigation report that we communicated to the 8 Probation Department. They have accepted some of our factual
9 proposed corrections and rejected a number of others; but I 10 don't believe that they have any impact on the calculation of 11 the sentencing guidelines and I don't ask your Honor to resolve 12 them because I think they are just different ways that we would 13 describe the conduct.

14 There is one which may seem very minor that I think we 15 would ask for it to be corrected, and that is in the section of 16 the presentence investigation report entitled Identifying Data.
17 The presentence investigation report indicates that Mr. Aiyer 18 has an alias, which is identified as Ashkay as opposed to 19 Akshay. As I said this is a relatively minor matter but I 20 understand an alias to be a different name that somebody goes 21 by often with the implication that they are trying to conceal
22 their identity. Mr. Aiyer does not go by Ashkay. It is a 23 mistaken pronunciation of his name or writing of his name, and 24 I think that is appropriately deleted.

25 THE COURT: What page of the presentence report?

K9H6AIYS

1 MR. KLOTZ: One minute, your Honor.

2 The alias identified is Ashkay, A-s-h-k-a-y.

3 This is at -- of the presentence investigation report.

5 MR. KLOTZ: Page 3.

6 THE COURT: I am sorry. I didn't hear you.

7 What paragraph?

8 MR. KLOTZ: It's the very bottom of that page. The 9 top of the page says, Identifying Data. The last entry is 10 aliases and it indicates "Aiyer, Ashkay" and I would ask that 11 that be amended to read "none."

12 THE COURT: All right. Does the government want to be 13 heard?

14 MR. HART: No, your Honor. The government does not 15 have an objection to that.

16 THE COURT: I will change on page 3 the aliases. I 17 will strike what is there now and write in "none."

18 MR. KLOTZ: Finally, your Honor, with respect to 19 calculation of the volume of commerce and the overall offense
20 level, I don't want to repeat things that are in our papers;
21 but in preparing for today's session, I did come across a point 22 that goes in my judgment directly to our argument that Mr.
23 Aiyer is entitled to a downward departure because the volume of 24 commerce overstates the significance of the activity. What I 25 would want to bring to your Honor's attention is that in

K9H6AIYS

1 discussing the relevant fine for an antitrust offense, the 2 sentencing guidelines while indicating that profits are 3 difficult to calculate and volume of commerce is an easier and 4 more ready way of calculating something that indicates the 5 profit to the defendant or the impact on commerce, in a note to 6 Section 2R1.1 -- it's n. 3, the guidelines state that it is 7 estimated that the increase in price when transactions are 8 affected by an illegal antitrust conspiracy is 10 percent of 9 the gross volume of the transaction. I am not giving a 10 verbatim quote, but that is the substance of it.

11 In other words, it indicates that the Sentencing 12 Commission had in mind that typically the benefit to the 13 defendant would be in the range of 10 percent of the total 14 volume of commerce. In this case, it is demonstrable that the 15 benefits of the defendant -- and by benefits of the defendant, 16 I am now talking about the benefit of the bank -- is nowhere 17 even remotely close to 10 percent of the volume of commerce.
18 The best illustration of that is the transaction on 19 February 28th, 2012, where there is an adjustment in the price 20 quoted to the client from 29.10 rubles to 29.08.

21 As our papers said if you do that calculation, the 22 benefit to J P Morgan Bank is $3,300. To Mr. Aiyer it is about 23 $165. The sentencing guideline rule of thumb would indicate 24 that a transaction of that size should have a benefit to the 25 defendant bank of $500,000, which is 150 times greater than the

K9H6AIYS

1 actual benefit amount, which is readily calculable. I simply 2 put that out there not just for the calculation of the 3 sentencing guidelines but because under 3553 addressing the 4 overall significance of the behavior here, I think it puts it 5 in a different context that relatively minimal amounts are 6 involved both for the bank and for sure for Mr. Aiyer.

7 THE COURT: Mr. Hart, do you want to comment?

8 MR. HART: Yes, your Honor.

9 What the defendant is referring to is something 10 separate as it relates to the overall calculation of the volume 11 of commerce. So his points can be contributed to 3553, but 12 there shouldn't be attached much weight to it.

13 THE COURT: All right. What defense counsel raises is 14 not in my view a reason for a downward departure from the 15 volume of commerce adjustment in the guidelines. I have gone 16 through a lengthy consideration of that particular enhancement 17 both from the standpoint of the commentary to the guidelines
18 and the Court of Appeals decision. It is a measure -- one 19 measure -- of the significance of the conspiracy to determine 20 the volume of commerce affected irrespective of what the 21 ultimate profit is to the bank or to the individual employee.
22 What is involved are transactions worth millions of dollars in 23 which sophisticated customers go to huge banks as the only 24 institutions capable of dealing with these types of 25 transactions. So a measure of the affect of the conspiracy is

1 volume of commerce.

2 The volume of commerce is carefully thought out in the 3 guideline and it's also carefully limited because it doesn't as 4 in some other context involve the total volume of commerce
5 involved in the conspiracy for example. It doesn't include 6 what is happening with the other conspirators and their 7 institutions. It involves only the defendant personally. So
8 it's not I think a good argument in favor of a downward 9 departure.

10 On the other hand, surely the profit to the defendant 11 is one aspect that can be taken into account under the 3553(a) 12 factors. The Court has broad discretion in considering the 13 3553(a) factors in arriving at a sentence that is sufficient 14 but no greater than necessary to accomplish the relevant goals 15 of sentencing. So I agree it is something that the Court can 16 take into account for the 3553(a) factors, and you are welcome 17 to expand on that in a moment.

18 MR. KLOTZ: Would you like me to --

19 THE COURT: Hold on. Hold on. I want to make sure 20 that I have finished with whether you have any other objections 21 to the presentence report.

22 MR. KLOTZ: We are finished, your Honor.

23 THE COURT: Okay. So now I will listen to you for 24 anything that you would like to tell me in connection with 25 sentence, anything you would like to tell me, anything you

K9H6AIYS

1 would like to discuss, anything at all.

2 MR. KLOTZ: Thank you, your Honor.

3 Let me start with the amount of money at stake from 4 the defendant's point of view since that was what we were just 5 discussing. It goes, your Honor, both to an appropriate 6 sentence and to the amount of the fine, which under the 7 sentencing guidelines is teed off of the volume of commerce but 8 intended to penalize the defendant for the benefit that he got 9 from the illegal conduct.

10 My point in both regards is simply the one I already 11 made. I think it is fairly ascertainable that the actual 12 benefit to the defendant in this case of all of the conduct 13 proven at trial is in maybe the thousands of dollars and the 14 benefit to his bank is certainly under a million dollars and 15 probably quite a bit under that. I ask your Honor to take that 16 into account in assessing the seriousness of the offense and 17 the appropriate level of a fine in the case.

18 THE COURT: The benefit to the bank was millions of 19 dollars?

20 MR. KLOTZ: I think less. I think the benefit to the 21 bank in the February 28 transaction, for instance, was $3,300.
22 That transaction is about 150th of the total volume of commerce
23 that was argued by the government. And if you multiply $5300
24 by 50 you get about $150,000. I think that is a fair estimate 25 of the benefit to the bank of all of the conduct at issue here.

K9H6AIYS

1 As we put in our papers, rough calculation, Mr. Aiyer was 2 compensated about 5 percent of the profits that he generated
3 for the bank. So if the benefits of the bank was about 4 $150,000 give or take, the benefit to Mr. Aiyer was in the 5 range of five or $10,000.

6 Now, you can quarrel with that number I suggest to 7 some degree, but I think that's the order of magnitude that we 8 are talking about and I think it's important. Now, I 9 understand that a large volume of commerce was involved and 10 that is a different measure and maybe appropriately taken into 11 consideration as well; but it seems to me it is also 12 appropriate to look at what the defendant personally had at 13 stake here in assessing the conduct at issue.

14 Then without repeating matters that we've discussed at 15 some length in our submissions, I just want to highlight for 16 your Honor various different considerations that I think the 17 case law allows your Honor to take into consideration in 18 reaching a just and fair sentence in this case. First and 19 foremost, I think your Honor is entitled to and should consider 20 the fundamental decency as a human being that Mr. Aiyer has 21 shown throughout his life. I don't want to repeat all that was 22 written by his friends and family on his behalf; but it is 23 clear that Mr. Aiyer from a very young age connected with 24 people and cared for other people very much. He is portrayed 25 in the letters as an incredibly kind, caring and compassionate

K9H6AIYS

1 person. I has never had any trouble with the law before. He 2 not a danger to the community.

3 Just some of the letters that talk about those 4 features of Mr. Aiyer as a person really stand out. To me one
5 of them was a friend who was on his way to the emergency room I 6 think when his spouse was out of town and was experiencing a 7 medical emergency and the person to whom he turned was 8 Mr. Aiyer. Mr. Aiyer came to his assistance and went to the 9 hospital. I believe had the person come home with him. But 10 that is illustrative of what you see in the letters on 11 Mr. Aiyer's behalf. Over and over and over again of people 12 talking about instances where he reached out in order to do 13 something to benefit them without any regard for his personal 14 interests.

15 He has also made concerted efforts to give back to his 16 community at large. For example, until the pandemic shut down 17 normal school function, Mr. Aiyer served for six months as a 18 volunteer math tutor in a program called Top Honors. He spent 19 three hours every Wednesday with a seventh grade student with 20 skills that translate to roughly a fourth-grade level. The 21 friend that introduced Mr. Aiyer to the program explains that 22 because of Mr. Aiyer's phenomenal tutoring and mentoring 23 capacity, this student has been thriving. That program was 24 suspended; but when it picks up again later in the school year, 25 Mr. Aiyer will continue to participate in it.

K9H6AIYS

1 Next, we have cited cases, and I don't think there is 2 an argument that your Honor may consider in fashioning an 3 appropriate sentence the collateral consequences to Mr. Aiyer 4 independent of the sentence that your Honor imposes. I would 5 like to highlight two of those collateral consequences
6 specifically. One is that as a result of is this 7 investigation, trial and conviction Mr. Aiyer has lost his job 8 and will clearly not work in financial services ever again in 9 his life. That's relevant because it goes to the need for 10 specific deterrence. Mr. Aiyer is not going to be in a 11 position to commit this kind of crime again. It is also a very 12 serious penalty that is imposed on him over and above anything 13 that your Honor can do in fashioning a sentence.

14 Secondly, I submit that the length of time that 15 Mr. Aiyer's life has been disrupted by this investigation and 16 trial is unusually long and is a special circumstance that 17 itself could be considered. Any criminal defendant is 18 inconvenienced by an investigation and trial that puts his life 19 in limbo for some period of time, but the six years that 20 Mr. Aiyer's life has been in limbo is unusually long. This was 21 a very lengthy investigation with charges brought at the end or 22 near the end of any arguably statute of limitation; and then, 23 as your Honor has noted, after that the proceedings have been 24 delayed many months through nobody's fault but as a result of 25 the pandemic. I think your Honor is entitled to take into

K9H6AIYS

1 consideration that burden that Mr. Aiyer has borne, which has 2 been quite extraordinary.

3 Third, one of the goals of sentencing is to prevent an 4 unwarranted disparity in sentences. Typically that unwarranted 5 disparity pertains only to persons who have been charged with 6 similar offenses and convicted and the Court looks to what 7 other people who have been convicted of this crime been 8 sentenced and it is of no relevance that there may have been 9 other people who committed the same or similar crime and were 10 not detected, were not prosecuted. We all know that the 11 government has great discretion.

12 I think Judge McMahon's sentencing decision in the 13 Connelly case is highly relevant to this case. Because Judge 14 McMahon found that granting that usually the fact that the 15 government has exercised its discretion to charge some people 16 and not others ought not be a relevant consideration. The 17 calculation changes somewhat when the conduct at issue is 18 endemic to an industry and literally dozens and possibly 19 hundreds people engaged in it but only a small handful are 20 selected as examples. In the Connelly and Black case, the 21 Judge McMahon decision, the conduct at issue was manipulation
22 of LIBOR. Judge McMahon found that this was an enormously 23 widespread problem in the industry and that it indicated that 24 the defendant in her case ought not be penalized especially 25 because he had the band fortune to be picked as an example to

K9H6AIYS

1 to send a message to the industry.

2 The misuse of chat rooms by currency traders is 3 similarly endemic. As the government has repeatedly stated, 4 virtually all of the major banks internationally were involved
5 in these investigations. Dozen and dozens of people have lost 6 their jobs and at the same time very few individuals have been 7 prosecuted and Mr. Aiyer I think is probably the only one of 8 them who is at risk of getting a jail sentence. As Judge
9 McMahon put it in the Connelly case that just doesn't seem fair 10 that the one person who has the bad luck to be prosecuted is 11 the person who gets that consequence.

12 Next, we cited cases that indicate that you can 13 consider the special consequences that flow from Mr. Aiyer's 14 status as a legal noncitizen. These include the risk of 15 deportation proceedings and the added stress that that places 16 on him but also the fact that a 2018 Bureau of Prison
17 memorandum requires that Mr. Aiyer be assigned to a low-quality 18 private prison for noncitizen probably at a great distance from 19 New York, which makes his service of a prison term not 20 certainly but very likely considerably more burdensome than the 21 same sentence would be if it were imposed on a citizen. Again, 22 Judge McMahon in the Connelly case felt that this was an 23 appropriate factor to take into consideration and again her 24 conclusion was this is just not fair that this defendant before 25 me would have to suffer much more severe terms of incarceration

K9H6AIYS

1 than an absolutely equally positioned citizen.

2 The government hasn't come back with much to suggest 3 that Mr. Aiyer would not be at a very high risk of going to one
4 of these private facilities. They cite a case from 2014, 5 United States v. Robson, in which the defendant didn't go to a 6 private facility for noncitizens, but that was before the 2018
7 policy memorandum of the Bureau of Prisons requiring that 8 noncitizens be sent to such facilities. Additionally as a 9 noncitizen, Mr. Aiyer, whether or not he goes to a private 10 facility, would not in the ordinary course be entitled to 11 assignment to a minimum security camp. He would have to at a 12 minimum go to an actual prison facility and he would be 13 ineligible for release to a halfway house after part of his 14 sentence.

15 Finally, the Court clearly can consider the current 16 pandemic as a factor that should figure in framing an 17 appropriate sentence. The argument is not that a prison 18 sentence is never appropriate because of the pandemic but that 19 in light of the pandemic that is an additional factor that 20 militates in favor of leniency.

21 I want to say a couple of things about the 22 government's most recent letter which we have not responded to 23 in writing because we didn't want to burden your Honor with 24 additional paper. Just three very quick points about that.
25 First, we cite a couple of cases where defendants whose

1 sentencing guidelines range was comparable to Mr. Aiyer
2 received noncustodial sentencings. The government responded, 3 oh, but those cases are different. And the first thing they 4 said about those cases, which I think they repeated and I think 5 they said this in earlier papers distinguishing cases we cited, 6 was that the defendant in those cases pleaded guilty as opposed 7 to the defendant here.

8 Well, as your Honor knows perfectly well, the 9 sentencing guidelines for a defendant that pleads guilty 10 already incorporate a discount for the fact that they pleaded 11 guilty and there is ample case law that a defendant other than 12 this discount that is built into the guidelines for a guilty 13 plea, a defendant ought not be further penalized for exercising 14 his right to proceed to trial. I submitted that that is 15 particularly important here where it is clear that the 16 potential immigration consequences of a conviction, whether by 17 plea or by trial, made it much more difficult for Mr. Aiyer to 18 contemplate a plea compared to a normal defendant who is a U.S.
19 citizen and would not have that added consequence of a 20 conviction.

21 THE COURT: The government distinguished one of the 22 cases by saying even though the sentence was "time-served," the 23 defendant had already spent 14 months in custody.

24 MR. KLOTZ: Yes. That was another distinguishing 25 feature, but that case along with the other one the government

K9H6AIYS

1 said keep in mind that both of these people pleaded guilty when 2 we said they both were subject to comparable sentencing 3 guidelines ranges.

4 The government argued in its letter that Mr. Aiyer 5 overstates the certainty of facing adverse consequences for 6 being a noncitizen. It is our understanding that the adverse 7 consequences that he faces from being a noncitizen are current 8 Department of Justice and Bureau of Prison policy. We 9 recognize that that doesn't mean it is a certainty, but that 10 means that any deviation from the policy of the Department of 11 Justice and Bureau of Prison is likely to be rare and/or 12 unintentional.

13 Finally, the government argues that Mr. Aiyer
14 overstates his personal risk from COVID-19 especially in light 15 in steps taken by the Bureau of Prisons to control the spread 16 of the disease. We all understand the seriousness I think,
17 your Honor, of the COVID pandemic. Mr. Aiyer is not arguing 18 that he is certain to contract COVID-19 if imprisoned or 19 certain to have a severe case if he contracts it, but much is 20 unknown about who is at greatest risk from the disease.
21 Prisons are clearly at-risk institutions. Mr. Aiyer has 22 sufficiently severe asthma to require regular use of an inhaler 23 and his asthma was sufficiently bad this past spring that 24 required a course of steroids as a treatment. His argument is 25 that the prevalent of COVID-19 is an added burden of unknown

K9H6AIYS

1 significance that attaches to any sentence of imprisonment.

2 Finally, I want to address the specific significance 3 of a period of incarceration of a year or more as distinct from 4 a sentence of incarceration or home detention of less than a 5 year.

6 If Mr. Aiyer is given a prison sentence of a year or 7 more, it is again the policy of the immigration authorities, 8 ICE, to lodge a detainer against such a person and take them 9 into custody at the conclusion of their sentence. They also 10 may do that in the case of anyone who gets any sentence of 11 imprisonment, but it is less likely if the sentence of 12 imprisonment is less than a year as distinct from a year or 13 more. Perhaps more importantly if Mr. Aiyer is taken into 14 custody by ICE at any point for any reason to commence removal 15 proceedings if his sentence of incarceration is a year or more, 16 his standard of being released pending the completion of those 17 removal proceedings is much higher and much more difficult to 18 meet. It is not the usual standard for release on bail of not 19 being a danger to the community or risk of flight. He would 20 have to prove in addition at the release-on-bail stage that he 21 was likely to prevail on the merits.

22 Now, if ICE were to bring removal proceedings against 23 Mr. Aiyer, he would contest them because he does not believe he 24 should be subject to removal, but those proceedings could last 25 a very long time. If he gets a sentence of a year or more

1 incarceration, he is at a highly elevated risk of serving that 2 entire period while those proceedings are pending, which could 3 be years, in an ICE facility. That we think, your Honor, is a 4 very important consideration to have in mind.

5 Your Honor, the outpouring of letters from friends, 6 family members, coworkers and other acquaintances show
7 Mr. Aiyer to be a kind, caring, and generous person. I can 8 truthfully say in my more than 20 years as a defense attorney, 9 I have never seen such an extensive and heartfelt show of 10 support ad it is completely consistent with the Akshay I have 11 come to know, a thoroughly decent person who made mistakes not 12 reflective of his general character almost 10 years ago.

13 Mr. Aiyer has been in a terrible personal and 14 professional limbo for six long years now, far longer than the 15 typical defendant in a criminal case, and I ask your Honor to 16 take this into consideration in passing sentence. He is 17 terrified at the prospect of being removed from the United 18 States and never being permitted to return, and I ask you to 19 take this into consideration as well. Most of all I ask you to 20 take into consideration his fundamental decency, the trait that 21 everyone who has had the good fortune of getting to know him 22 recognizes immediately.

23 Thank you.

24 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Klotz.

25 Mr. Aiyer, have you reviewed the presentence report,

K9H6AIYS

1 the recommendation, and the addendum and discussed them with 2 your lawyer?

3 THE DEFENDANT: I have, your Honor.

4 THE COURT: I've already said and other than what your 5 lawyer has already said, do you have any objections?

6 THE DEFENDANT: No, your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Okay. I will listen to you now for 8 anything that you would like to tell me in connection with 9 sentence, any statement that you would like to make, anything 10 at all that you would like to tell me.

11 THE DEFENDANT: Yes, your Honor. I just want to say I 12 suffered a lot the last six years. It's been the worse
13 experience of my like. I've always tried to conduct myself 14 professionally with integrity and concern for others. I always 15 prided myself for putting my clients' interests first. It was 16 a profound shock to me to be investigated as a criminal, tried 17 as one and convicted as one.

18 I recognize that I have no one to blame but myself. I 19 did things that were thoughtful, careless and unprofessional.
20 And when I saw others behaving similarly, I did not stand up an 21 object. I did not use my best judgment and live up to my own 22 standards and for this I am very sorry.

23 My friends and family, my coworkers and the court
24 system and I know you yourself spent a lot of time on this case 25 and I thank you for that.

K9H6AIYS

1 Worst of all, I regret the pain I caused Alex, who 2 stood by me and been my strongest supporter. About my family,
3 I was unable to be there when my grandmother and grandfather 4 passed away a couple months ago. I lost my job and ruined my 5 career. And I suffered from anxiety and stress and tried to 6 undergo counseling to cope with it the best I can. More than 7 anything else, I may have to leave what I call home and built 8 as my home for the last 18 years.

9 I accept that you will pass sentence on me, I only ask 10 that you do so with compassion.

11 Thank you.

12 THE COURT: Mr. Hart, has the government reviewed the 13 presentence report, the recommendation, and the addendum?

14 MR. HART: Yes, it has, your Honor.

15 THE COURT: Other than --

16 MR. HART: I don't have any objections.

17 THE COURT: Hold on. Let me ask the question first.

18 MR. HART: Okay.

19 THE COURT: Other than all of the objections that I 20 have already dealt with, does the government have any 21 objections?

22 MR. HART: No, your Honor.

23 THE COURT: I will listen to you now for anything that 24 you would like to tell me in connection with sentence, any 25 statement that the government wishes to make.

K9H6AIYS

1 MR. HART: Yes, your Honor. Thank you.

2 First, I would like to address a couple points that 3 Mr. Klotz raised with respect to the fine and the profits of 4 the bank. The government would like to note to the Court that 5 profit does not equal gain from the offense because we don't 6 know what would have happened if in fact there was competition.

7 COURT REPORTER: Counsel, you are breaking up.

8 MR. HART: The point I was making was that profit does 9 not equal gain from the offense because we don't know what 10 would have happened if there was in fact competition. That is 11 why that is not a good measurement and that is why the 12 guidelines and one of the driving forces for you to use the 13 methodology to determine the volume of commerce.

14 Another issue I would like to raise, your Honor, is 15 something that the defendant's counsel talked about, others not 16 being prosecuted. It is impermissible for the Court to 17 consider individuals or entities that were never prosecuted.
18 Section 3553(a)(6) is clear that a court must consider what the 19 need is to avoid unwarranted sentence disparities among similar 20 defendants with similar records who have been found guilty of 21 similar conduct. There is no statutory nor Second Circuit
22 authority for considering similarly situated uncharged 23 offenders. We direct the Court to U.S. v. Douglas, which 24 states: "Assuming without deciding that a district court may 25 take patterns of prosecutorial discretion into account in

K9H6AIYS

1 determining an equitable sentence that avoids unwarranted
2 disparities among similarly situated offenders an appellate 3 court is ill placed to assess whether a defendant is in fact 4 similarly situated to others whose circumstances, because they 5 Were never prosecuted, are unknown to us."

6 It is the government's position that that also is true 7 for trial judges. To do so would improperly intrude on the 8 Executive Branch as acknowledge by the Supreme Court in U.S. v.
9 Goodwin, which --

10 COURT REPORTER: Counsel, you have to repeat your last 11 sentence.

12 THE COURT: And, counsel, please get closer to you 13 microphone because you are breaking up.

14 MR. HART: I apologize, your Honor.

15 The sentence was: To do so would intrude on the 16 Executive Branch as acknowledged by the Supreme Court in the 17 United States v. Goodwin where it held, In our criminal system, 18 the government retains raw discretion as to whom to prosecute.

19 The area I would like to touch on is the collateral 20 consequences from the defendant's alienage. The Bureau of 21 Prisons and ICE policies related to the treatment of an alien 22 inmate are at least disfavored factors at sentencing.

23 COURT REPORTER: Counsel, repeat the last sentence.

24 MR. HART: BOP and ICE policies related to the 25 treatment of alien inmates are at least disfavored factors at

1 sentencing and in this case are not extraordinary enough to 2 warrant a variance down to a noncustodial sentence. Varying 3 downwards based on the conditions of confinement
4 inappropriately intrudes on the Bureau of Prisons' discretion 5 over the place and conditions of confinement of the inmate in 6 its charge. ICE policies on detention of an immigrant prior to 7 removal are also not generally matters that a sentencing court 8 should consider.

9 THE COURT: You are not coming through. I see you on 10 the screen that you are talking, but I don't hear you.

11 MR. HART: Can you hear me?

12 THE COURT: Barely.

13 MR. HART: Your Honor, may I take a moment to address 14 the situation?

15 THE COURT: Absolutely.

16 (Pause)

17 MR. HART: Your Honor, is that better?

18 THE COURT: I can hear you.

19 Now I can't.

20 MR. HART: Your Honor, perhaps it would be better if I 21 phoned in.

22 THE COURT: Mr. Fletcher should be on the feed from 23 Skype.

24 Mr. Fletcher, you may want to call Mr. Griffincantz 25 for some assistance to see what can be done.

K9H6AIYS

1 THE DEPUTY CLERK: I will. Let me email him.

2 THE COURT: Thank you.

3 Mr. Griffincrantz is one of our court tech people.

4 MR. HART: Your Honor, should I attempt to call in by 5 phone.

6 THE COURT: Okay.

7 (Pause)

8 MR. HART: Your Honor, can you hear me?

9 THE COURT: Yes. You are a little low.

10 MR. HART: How about now, your Honor?

11 Appreciate everyone's patience.

12 To further address whether or not the defendant would 13 be ineligible or rather directed to a private facility, the 14 2018 policy that the defendant cites says only that such 15 prisoners should be identified or considered for consideration 16 for transfer to a private facility. Also, the Bureau of 17 Prisons give weight to the initial recommendation in making 18 designation recommendations.

19 I also want to talk about the pandemic, COVID-19. The 20 Bureau of Prisons has and continues to take affirmative 21 measures to ensure the health and safety of the inmates in its 22 charge. For example, the Bureau of Prison has enhanced 23 screening techniques for staff and visitors; better isolating 24 and quarantine protocols, including the need to test negative 25 on multiple tests prior to reintegration; issue face coverings

K9H6AIYS

1 to inmates and staff; limit large groups and require face 2 coverings when social distancing is not possible; as well as 3 enacting better screening and control of prisoner transfers to 4 prevent commingling of both symptomatic and asymptomatic
5 inmates within the general inmate population.

6 Moreover, the defendant is 37 years old and healthy.
7 He does not have any chronic illnesses and has not been 8 hospitalized. The only risk factor the defendant has 9 identified to the Court is his having slight trace of asthmatic 10 symptoms due to seasonal allergies to tree pollen. Simply put, 11 he does not have severe or moderate asthma. Even if he did,
12 the data suggests that a moderate to severe asthma condition
13 does not place a person as a higher risk of a serious outcome
14 from COVID. The CDC has taken asthma off its risk factor list.
15 In fact, the government is unaware of the defendant having any 16 health condition that places him at a greater risk of a serious 17 outcome from the virus.

18 In addition, what could happen while the defendant is 19 incarcerated is too speculative at this point to bear any 20 significant weight. To the extent the defendant is vying for 21 some sort of compassionate-release type consideration, it 22 simply is inappropriate to consider that at sentencing. That 23 issue is not before the Court.

24 THE COURT: Mr. Hart, could you hold on just a moment.
25 I hear you, but we don't have your video. Have you decided not

K9H6AIYS

1 to continue with the video?

2 MR. HART: No, your Honor. I can see you and I see 3 the gentleman over your right shoulder.

4 THE COURT: That gentleman is here to give some advice
5 on how to get your video on because we're not seeing you.

6 MR. HART: Okay.

7 MR. KLOTZ: We are in fact seeing Mr. Hart, your 8 Honor.

9 (Pause)

10 THE COURT: We have you back on the screen.

11 You can proceed.

12 MR. HART: Thank you, your Honor.

13 We ask the Court to sentence the defendant to a 14 guideline sentence because it is sufficient but not greater 15 than necessary to combine with the purposes of sentencing, 16 namely, that a sentence would reflect the seriousness of the 17 offense, promote respect for the law, and provide just 18 punishment for the offense and to afford adequate deterrence to 19 criminal conduct.

20 Moreover, a sentence with a significant period of 21 imprisonment would avoid unwarranted sentencing disparities
22 among defendants convicted of the same crime. Here, this is a 23 very serious offense. The guidelines are instructive in that 24 there is near universal agreement that restrictive agreements 25 can cause serious economic harm and that is exactly what

K9H6AIYS

1 happened here, your Honor. In this case the defendant was one
2 of the most active and sophisticated traders in this market.
3 He conspired to rig bids in a number of emerging market
4 currencies over a period of several years.

5 The defendant and his coconspirators agreed to submit 6 specific prices when dealing with customers directly and on the 7 inner bank platform, and the defendant and his coconspirators 8 intended to affect the price of currency by manipulating the 9 forces of supply and demand. His actions, and those of his 10 co-conspirators, not only violated important competitive 11 principles it undermined the integrity of the largest financial 12 market in the world, but also in some instances cheated these 13 customers who invested on behalf of pension funds and 14 retirement funds.

15 It is important to note that the defendant was aware 16 of the existence of the conspiracy and he actively sought to 17 join it and time and time again he worked with his 18 co-conspirators to further its goals. The defendant was not an 19 unwitting participant of the conspiracy and he played an active 20 role as a director. From the beginning, the defendant knew it 21 was wrong as evidenced by the exchange when his conspirators 22 suggested that his conspiracy to coordinate price quotes and 23 bids to customers are nice, he laughed and responded that they 24 probably shouldn't write such thing in Perma chat rooms.

25 In addition, the defendant took measures to conceal

K9H6AIYS

1 his conduct to avoid detection from the bank, including using 2 codewords, communicating on cell phones instead of recorded 3 bank lines, and meeting in person to discuss the conspiracy 4 with his coconspirators. Such evidence demonstrates his 5 consciousness of wrongdoing. In addition, in order to hold the 6 defendant solely accountable for his conduct, the defendant's 7 sentence should also take into account conduct related to fake 8 trades and spoofing. This conduct was not accounted for in the 9 volume of commerce calculation but was intrinsic to the charged 10 conspiracy.

11 To date despite a jury of his peers finding him guilty 12 he has not expressed any remorse. In short, the defendant and 13 his co-conspirators were greedy and arrogant. The defendant 14 and his co-conspirators routinely exploited a system over which 15 they had some power. A guideline sentence is the appropriate 16 way to hold the defendant accountable for his criminal conduct 17 and for his disregard for the rule of law. In addition, a 18 guideline sentence would also serve to deter other traders 19 driven by greed who may be tempted to cheat the system.

20 We ask the Court to consider his background. He was 21 well educated, a wealthy man and had a senior position at one 22 the world's largest financial institutions, a man of privilege
23 and a man of substantial means. To be clear this was a crime 24 of opportunity and greed, not one out of necessity.

25 There cannot be two justice systems -- one for

K9H6AIYS

1 white-collard criminals and one for everyone else. The need
2 for general deterrence great. A guideline sentence should 3 serve as a reminder to would-be white-collared criminals who 4 may engage the cost-benefit analysis before deciding to engage 5 in elicited activity. Not meting out a guidelines sentence the 6 carries a significant period of incarceration runs the risk of 7 sending the wrong message to criminals that they will not be 8 held accountable and that potential penalties for violating the 9 law is a risk worth taking and is merely a cost of doing 10 business.

11 THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

12 I will place the presentence report, the 13 recommendation and the addendum in the record under seal. The 14 parties should place their submissions in the record not under 15 seal -- they may have already done this -- after redacting any 16 personal identifying information.

17 I adopt the findings of fact in the presentence report 18 except for the two changes that I already noted in the 19 guideline sentencing range for the fine. The guideline 20 sentencing range for fines begins at $20,000, and I have 21 changed page 3 to reflect "none" for aliases.

22 Therefore, I conclude that under the current 23 guidelines the total offense level is 21, the criminal history
24 category is one, and the guideline sentencing range is 37 to 46 25 months. I appreciate that the guidelines are only advisory and

K9H6AIYS

1 that the Court must consider the various sentencing factors in 2 18, U.S.C., Section 3553(a) and impose a sentence that is 3 sufficient but no greater than necessary to comply with the 4 purposes set forth in Section 3553(a)(2).

5 The offense is very serious. The defendant 6 participated in a conspiracy to fix prices and rig bids for 7 certain currencies. The conspiracy involved millions of 8 dollars of transactions and involved several major banks and it
9 existed for over two and a half years. The conspiracy 10 threatened the integrity of the market and showed disregard for 11 the legitimate expectations of customers who expected a 12 competitive market.

13 There is a hint in the defense submissions that the 14 defendant should not be held responsible because given the huge 15 civil settlements in other cases, everyone did it. That 16 plainly is not an excuse nor a reasonable argument in 17 mitigation. The chats indicate that the defendant was aware 18 that what he was doing was not lawful. He suggested, for 19 example, that the comment about conspiracies being "nice" 20 should not be on Perma chat. The defendant also argues that he 21 is somehow being singled out, but that ignores the fact that 22 there are two other co-conspirators who have pleaded guilty.

23 A substantial sentence is necessary to reflect the 24 seriousness of the offense, to promote respect for the law, and 25 to provide just punishment for the offense. A substantial

K9H6AIYS

1 sentence is also necessary for deterrence. There are 2 mitigating circumstances. This is the defendant's first 3 offense and the crime is a nonviolent crime. The defendant has 4 the support of his family and large group of friends and 5 colleagues dating back to his college days. The defendant has 6 suffered collateral consequences, including the loss of his 7 job.

8 The investigation in this case has hung over the 9 defendant for an unusually long period of time. The defense 10 argues that it is six years. The defendant could have fled the 11 United States during that period of time but chose not to. The 12 existence of the investigation has plainly been a serious toll 13 on the defendant.

14 The defendant may well be removed from the United 15 States as a result of his conviction. Therefore, the need to 16 deter the defendant individually from future crimes and to 17 protect the public from the defendant are somewhat negated.
18 While it is true that there is a need for general deterrence, 19 the need general deterrence can never justify a sentence for an 20 individual that is greater than a just sentence for that 21 individual.

22 The defendant also relies on the existence of the 23 COVID-19 pandemic and argues that any sentence of imprisonment
24 should be avoided because the risk of his contracting COVID-19 25 in prison and the risk of his having serious consequences

K9H6AIYS

1 should argue against incarceration. However, it does not 2 appear that the defendant is in a particularly high risk
3 category. He is a relatively young person and his physical 4 problems are minimal. Moreover, it is unclear what institution 5 the defendant could be sentenced to and what the conditions of 6 that institution may be. To the extent that circumstances may 7 change, the defendant can always make subsequent applications 8 such as an application for compassionate release; but those 9 hypothetical considerations about future circumstances are 10 insufficient to avoid a sentence that is otherwise called for 11 to accomplish the purposes of Section 3553(a)(2).

12 The question is what is a sentence that is sufficient 13 but no greater than necessary to accomplish the purposes of 14 Section 3553(a)(2), where to draw the balance. On balance, 15 the Court intends to impose a sentence of eight months' 16 imprisonment on Count One to be followed by a two-year term of 17 supervised release with the standard conditions of supervised
18 release in this district and those recommended by the Probation 19 Department, except the Court will not include a term of 20 outpatient mental health treatment because there is no 21 indication that such treatment is needed.

22 I will also not include the conditions of access to 23 financial records and no additional credit charges because 24 those conditions are linked to an installment payment schedule, 25 which will not exist in this case.

K9H6AIYS

1 The Court will impose fine of $150,000 payable within 2 30 days. The defendant has the ability to pay that fine based 3 on the presentence report. The Court will not impose 4 restitution because the complex issues of fact related to the 5 amount of individual victims' losses and the calculation of 6 those losses would contemplate and prolong the sentencing 7 process to a degree that the need to provide restitution to pay 8 any victim is outweighed by the burden on the sentencing 9 process.

10 The Court will impose a $100 special assessment.

11 The Court will provide for voluntary surrender.

12 The Court intends to make the recommendation to the 13 Bureau of Prisons of imprisonment at a facility in the New York 14 City area so that the defendant can be close to his family; but 15 if defense counsel has any other recommendation with respect to 16 confinement, the Court is prepared to accept any such 17 recommendation.

18 The sentence that the Court has explained but not yet 19 imposed is consistent with the factors in Section 3553(a) and 20 is sufficient but no greater than necessary to comply with the 21 purposes of Section 3553(a)(2). I have explained the reasons 22 for the sentence.

23 Before I actually impose the sentence, I will 24 recognize defense counsel and then the defendant and the 25 government for anything that they wish to say.

K9H6AIYS

1 Mr. Klotz.

2 MR. KLOTZ: Thank you, your Honor. I think just for 3 the record I need to object to the sentence, but I won't say 4 anything beyond that.

5 I appreciate your Honor's recommendation that 6 Mr. Aiyer be assigned to a facility in the New York region. I 7 would ask that you specifically recommend that he be assigned 8 to a minimum security camp in the New York city region.
9 Otisville would be an obvious candidate. I think a facility 10 like that is a facility where he would be assigned were it not 11 for his citizenship status. I am not certain how much weight 12 that recommendation will carry; but to the extent that it 13 carries any weight, I would appreciate your Honor making that 14 recommendation.

15 I would also ask, but I don't know that this needs to 16 be resolved before you impose sentence, that Mr. Aiyer be 17 continued on bail pending appeal rather than ask to surrender 18 voluntarily at some point down the road. I am not sure if your 19 Honor wants us to address that now.

20 THE COURT: I never tell parties what to do, but I 21 would suggest to you that it would not be in your interest to 22 make that application now because I plainly have the authority 23 to allow voluntary surrender and to set the date for voluntary 24 surrender. For a stay of surrender pending appeal, there are 25 provisions in the statute that have to be satisfied, including

K9H6AIYS

1 that I find that an appeal is taken in good faith and that 2 there are meritorious issues on appeal, that those kinds of 3 arguments without any sort of briefing would not lend 4 themselves immediately to a decision.

5 I intend to impose voluntary surrender by 2:00 p.m. on 6 December 4, 2020, which means that you would have an 7 opportunity to make applications, and if those applications 8 were not successful before me to use any other avenues that 9 might be open to you.

10 MR. KLOTZ: If that is the way your Honor wishes to 11 proceed, we would like an opportunity to brief this issue. I
12 take it what your Honor is saying is that you will impose 13 sentence now and we can promptly then move, if we elect to do 14 so, for a continuation of bail rather than voluntary surrender 15 and you can decide that issue down the road.

16 THE COURT: Yes. I already told you that I don't 17 foreclose parties from doing anything that they think that they 18 have a right to do.

19 I have denied the motion for judgment of acquittal or 20 for a new trial in a lengthy opinion. In order to release the 21 defendant pending appeal, I would have to find not only by 22 clear and convincing evidence that the defendant is not likely 23 to flee or pose a danger to the safety or other persons or the 24 community if released, which I could find, but that the appeal 25 is not for purposes of delay and raises a substantial question

K9H6AIYS

1 of law or fact likely to result in a reversal, an order for a 2 new trial, or a sentence that does not include a term of 3 imprisonment or a reduced sentence to a term of imprisonment 4 less than the total time already spent.

5 In view of everything that I said in denying the 6 motion for a judgment of acquittal or for a new trial, it would 7 be difficult now to say that I thought that there were 8 substantial questions. On the other hand, I never decide 9 anything until it's briefed on the facts and the law. So it is 10 up to you. If you want to make that application now, you can.

11 MR. KLOTZ: No, your Honor. I think our preference 12 would be to make the application promptly after we finish this 13 proceeding. I would point out that the law on the standard is 14 it does not require your Honor to find that you are likely to 15 be reversed. What it requires your Honor to find is that there 16 are serious issues and that if those issues were decided in 17 defendant's favor, which your Honor understandably thinks is 18 not likely.

19 THE COURT: If anyone has another phone on, stop it.

20 By the way, if at any time a lawyer begins to talk to 21 me about reversal, I always say that I do what I believe the 22 facts and the law dictate and I welcome parties to take my 23 decisions to any other court. One of the joys of being a 24 district court judge is that we know that nothing we do is ever 25 final and anything we do can be reviewed, and that is a matter

K9H6AIYS

1 of comfort to us. So when notions such as reversal are put out
2 there, my reaction is: Do whatever you think is appropriate
3 for your client. I do what I think under the facts and the law
4 I should do and I welcome review. So don't feel reluctant.

5 MR. KLOTZ: Thank you, your Honor. I am not 6 reluctant. I don't intend to press the application now. We'll 7 do it subsequently on papers. My point is I think the standard 8 is one that can be satisfied here without your Honor finding 9 that we're likely to prevail. It doesn't require such a 10 finding.

11 THE COURT: I understand the distinction. I 12 understand the distinction.

13 Anything else, Mr. Klotz?

14 MR. KLOTZ: No, your Honor.

15 THE COURT: Mr. Aiyer, before --

16 MR. HART: Your Honor, may I have a moment to speak.

17 THE COURT: No. Hold on. I am calling the parties in 18 order. Mr. Klotz was first, Mr. Aiyer is second, and you are 19 third.

20 So, Mr. Aiyer, before I actually impose the sentence, 21 I will recognize you for anything you wish to tell me, anything 22 you would like to say on your behalf, anything at all you would 23 like to say.

24 THE DEFENDANT: I would just like to apologize one 25 more time to my friends and family and to Alex.

K9H6AIYS

1 THE COURT: Mr. Hart, I will recognize you for 2 anything the government wants to tell me before I actually 3 impose sentence.

4 MR. HART: Yes, your Honor. I just want to make the 5 record clear that the government opposes a downward variance
6 and believes that a guidelines sentence should be appropriate 7 here.

8 THE COURT: Thank you.

9 Pursuant to the Sentencing Reform Act of 1984, it is 10 the judgment of this Court that the defendant, Akshay Aiyer, is 11 hereby committed to the custody of the Bureau of Prisons to be 12 imprisoned for a term of eight months on Count One. I 13 recommend incarceration in the New York City area so that the 14 defendant can be close to his family. I recommend 15 incarceration at a minimal security camp of the Bureau of 16 Prisons in the New York City area.

17 The defendant will voluntarily surrender to an 18 institution designated by the Bureau of Prisons by 2:00 p.m. on 19 December 4, 2020.

20 Upon release from imprisonment, the defendant shall be 21 placed on supervised release for a term of two years on Count 22 One.

23 Within 72 hours of release from the custody of the 24 Bureau of Prisons, the defendant shall report in person to the 25 Probation Office in the district to which the defendant is

K9H6AIYS

1 released. While on supervised release, the defendant shall 2 comply with the standard conditions of supervised release in 3 this district. The defendant shall not commit another federal,
4 state or local crime. The defendant shall not possess a 5 firearm or destructive device as defined in 18, U.S.C., 921.
6 The defendant shall refrain from any unlawful use or possession
7 of a controlled substance. The defendant shall submit to one 8 drug test within 15 days of release from imprisonment and at 9 least two periodic drug tests thereafter as directed by the 10 Probation officer.

11 The defendant shall cooperate with the immigration 12 authorities and comply with all immigration laws.

13 The defendant must cooperate in the collection of DNA
14 as directed by the Probation officer.

15 It is further ordered that the defendant shall pay to 16 the United States a special assessment of $100, which shall be 17 due immediately. The defendant shall pay a fine of $150,000, 18 which is payable within 30 days.

19 I have already explained the reasons for the sentence.

20 Does either counsel know of any legal reason why this 21 sentence should not be imposed as I have so stated it?

22 MR. HART: No, your Honor.

23 MR. KLOTZ: No, your Honor.

24 THE COURT: I order the sentence to be imposed as I so 25 stated it for all the reason I have explained.

K9H6AIYS

1 Mr. Aiyer, you have the right to appeal. The notice 2 of appeal must be filed within 14 days after the entry of the 3 judgment of conviction. The judgment of conviction is entered 4 promptly after the judge announces sentence. So you should 5 discuss this issue promptly with your lawyer. If you cannot 6 pay the cost of appeal, you have the right to apply for leave 7 to appeal in forma pauperis. If you request, the clerk will 8 prepare and file a notice of appeal on your behalf immediately.

9 Do you understand?

10 THE DEFENDANT: Yes.

11 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Hart, no open counts?

12 MR. HART: No, your Honor.

13 THE COURT: I usually ask as a matter of prudence for 14 the government to move to dismiss any open counts, but there is 15 clearly are no open counts here; is that right?

16 MR. HART: There's Correct, your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Mr. Klotz, do you agree?

18 MR. KLOTZ: Agree, your Honor.

19 THE COURT: So I will not do what I usually do.

20 Anything further?

21 MR. KLOTZ: No, your Honor.

22 MR. HART: Not from the government.

23 MR. KLOTZ: Can I put you on mute and confer with my 24 colleagues?

25 THE COURT: Yes. You can mute yourself.

K9H6AIYS

1 Mr. Hart, if you have any lawyers on the telephone 2 line, you can consult with them, too.

3 MR. KLOTZ: We have nothing further, your Honor.

4 THE COURT: Nothing from the government?

5 MR. HART: Nothing further, your Honor.

6 THE COURT: Good-bye, all.
